SCHOOL TEACHERS

THEIR DUTIES AND RESPONSIBILITIES ARE GREAT.

Some Patrons Still Believe That Teachers Should Keep School From Sun to Sun.

News and Notions says there is doubtless no other profession so commonly used as stepping stone to enable many to enter a profession usually considered more remunerative and exalted than teaching. Perhaps society itself is partly responsible for permitting this intrusion, but the intrusion is being made, whether fostered by society or not. What a common occurrence it is to see a young man "keep school" law or medicine, or a young lady "keep school" to earn money for her wedding trousseau. Society, patrons and often trustees are unable to distinguish between the teacher who scientifically trains and develops all the God-given physical and mental powers of the child.

In rank, teaching should be classed as a profession next to the ministry, or perhaps co-ordinate with it; for the teacher details with the mind while it is in a plastic condition and very capable of being molded. Then, too, the teacher, by means of daily association and personal contact with the child, is able, in a manner, to guide and assist the mind of the child in character-building. He helps the child's mind to do right-thinking and right-acting.

Many people have erroneous ideas about teaching, yet almost every patron knows just precisely what it behooves the teacher to do at all times. How common is the idea that the teacher sits in an easy-chair in the shade for a few hours in the day and coins money with very little effort. Really, the true teacher is, and must always be, the most diligent pupil in the school, regardless of his preparation for an experience in teaching. The teacher's work is not confined to a few hours in the day, but begins with the opening of school and ends with the closing. Just as the body hungers and thirsts daily for the various food substances, so necessary to sustain life, so the mind hungers and thirsts daily for the food necessary for mental growth and development. This mental food must be supplied daily by the teacher if we proceed in accordance with the laws of nature.

Some patrons still believe that teachers should keep children in school from sun to sun. They forget that there is a difference between manual labor and mental labor. Keeping a child in school from sun to sun chains his body to a seat; but it fails to keep his mind at work. Though his body is in school, his mind is most likely elsewhere. The mind receives instruction only while in a receptive attitude. Teachers may rush children mechanically through books, but they cannot rush or force the contents of any book through the child's mind.

Perhaps the Greeks realized the immense responsibility of the teacher better than many others; for they employed pedagogues to attend the children to and from school and very carefully direct and guide the child in character-building and virtuous living. This left the teacher free to impart what we term "book learning," for want of a better term. The modern teacher has the work of teacher and pedagogue. Still his profession is regarded as a trivial one by many; when skillful experienced teachers look into the faces of old pupils of theirs and see their own thoughts, ideas and habits reflected, as it were, in a mirror, we think they have just cause to think of shirking duty and shuddering at the enormous amount of responsibility.

KILLED THE INSPECTOR.
Who Had Checked Him Short in His Accounts.

Postoffice Inspector Charles Fitzgerald, of Jackson, Miss., was shot and killed by W. A. Sorsby, clerk in the Clinton postoffice. Fitzgerald had been in Clinton two days checking up their office, of which Mrs. Cabaniss is postmistress. Sorsby married her daughter and has been running the office. Fitzgerald is said to have checked him up short several hundred dollars and had started back to his home in Jackson. While on the way to the train Sorsby suddenly appeared before him, stuck a pistol to his side and fired before his victim could raise his hand.

CROWDS ATTEND THE OPENING.
Theodore Kohn's Popular Store
Thronged With Shoppers.

One of the most successful Fall Opening ever held in Orangeburg, was the one at Kohn's Emporium today.

Of course most of the ladies came to see the new hat creations and according to Caesar, "They came, they saw, and they were conquered." Miss Rosalie Barton and her corps of assistants fairly demonstrated their expertness in giving the trade the most exquisite designs, blends of colors, and stylish headwear yet seen in this city.

From the many expressions of delight and admiration it is a certainty that the store will have a most favorable season.

The Opening will continue tomorrow and many out of town visitors are expected.

We congratulate the management for giving Orangeburg such a praiseworthy demonstration of up-to-date business judgment.

There is no sentiment in a mule, but a mule is different from a boy. They cannot be successfully trained by the same methods.

TO HELP FARMERS

COMPANY PROPOSES TO FINANCE HANDLING OF COTTON.

Meeting of the Stockholders of the Standard Warehouse Company Resulted in Re-election of Officers.

The Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, which has just been organized in Columbia, with a capital stock of $50,000, is to co-operate with the farmers in borrowing money on their cotton on the Standard warehouse receipts. This is to be the chief purpose of the new organization, which bids fair to do much along this line and be of much benefit in the proper sale of the South's main product—cotton.

A meeting of the directors of the Standard Warehouse Company was held Friday and there was a discussion of the most feasible plan of co-operating with the farmers. It was decided that to bring about the best results in aiding the farmers and others in borrowing money on the warehouse receipts was the organization of this independent trust company. The capital of the company is $50,000, each share being placed at a par value of $100.

The Farmers' Loan and Trust Company will underwrite the loans that are to be based upon the receipts of the Standard Warehouse Company. The company has made all arrangements for the carrying out of its purpose and if all the plans carry out as expected it is believed that the organization will be able to loan considerable blocks of money in this State on the warehouse receipts.

The incorporators of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company are as follows: Messrs. Edwin W. Robertson, Lewis W. Parker, T. B. Stackhouse, J. L. Minnaugh.

All stockholders of the Standard Warehouse Company will be invited to take stock in the new company, the chief purpose of which organization will be to secure money on the warehouse receipts.

At a meeting of the Standard Warehouse Company stockholders, held Friday, the following directors were elected: T. B. Stackhouse, Lewis W. Parker, Ellison A. Smythe, R. E. Ligon, E. W. Wannamaker of Orangeburg, C. E. Sumner of Newberry, J. K. Durst of Greenwood.

The board of directors held a meeting yesterday also and the following officers were elected: T. B. Stackhouse, president and treasurer; Ellison A. Smythe, first vice president; Edwin W. Robertson, second vice president; C. T. Lipscomb, assistant treasurer and secretary.

It is expected that the co-operation of the new Farmers' Loan and Trust Company with the farmers by means of the cotton warehouse receipts of the Standard Warehouse Company will lead to beneficial results.
